About Resurgence Support Payment

A Resurgence Support Payment (RSP) is available to support businesses and organisations affected by the rise in COVID-19 alert levels. They must:

- have been in business for 6 months or more, and
- have experienced at least a 30% decline in revenue over a 7-day period at the increased alert level. The revenue decline is compared to a typical 7-day revenue period, this will generally be in the six weeks prior to the alert level increase. Find out more about the comparison period and eligibility criteria for the Resurgence Support Payment
- attribute their decline in revenue to the increase in alert level.

To apply you'll need the following information:

- Your New Zealand business number (NZBN). Find out more about NZBN numbers
- Details of your business's revenue decline from the alert level period and comparison period
- Employee details - including name, IRD number, and whether they are full-time or part-time
- A bank account number

If you're part of a commonly owned group of businesses or organisations, you'll also need:

- The name and IRD number of everyone in the group, and
- Details of the group's revenue decline.

Your business or organisation and the commonly owned group must:

- Have experienced at least a 30% decline in revenue
- use the same 7-day period at the increased alert level, and
- use the same 7-day comparison period.

Employees ?

We need to know how many full-time and part-time employees you have to calculate the RSP amount. The employee information below is based on Employment Information returns you have filed in the last 30 days.

Up to 50 full-time equivalent employees can be included to calculate the RSP amount. Remember to add yourself, and any other business owners who are not included on the Employment Information returns.

Ensure you review this information and:

- remove any employees no longer working for you
- add any employees working for you who are not in this list
- tell us whether each employee is full-time or part-time
